BOWLING

The Roughnecks again made the Three Musketeers walk the plank at Parrin's Alleys Saturday afternoon. About an even match was registered during the first and second string, but in the third the rough element socalled landed on the Musketeers and increased the small lead to a wide margin. Dick Gray was high single and total with Paul Nevers one pin behind on both counts. Summary:

Capt. Mel Sampson has made the rounds of the camps about the lake and shoveled snow from roofs left in his care. The captain predicts for next season the largest summer business Lake Pennesseewassee ever experienced. Ice won't go out for at least nine weeks yet. Capt. Mel is growing restless and counts the days when he can launch his fleet.

Hotel and Norway

From Sunny California

May I add my word about the new hotel proposed for our little town. I think Dr. Stephens' an ideal place and have always thought so, but I doubt if he would give up his home and I for one don't want him to. Farther up the road from the doctor's are many pretty sites, if I remember rightly.

But I really think that I'd like to see Norway have a "decent" library before it has a hotel. I believe that would advertise us as much as a hotel. South Paris seems about to have one, I wish—, but there, the year is still new and I must not be selfish.

My sister and I are deeply interested in all that pertains to Norway's welfare and advancement. It won't be long before we too will be part of the town, as we return the last of April to our home-on-the-hill-top. We read each week of Mellie and Gram, and say, "Can you beat it?" They are having their day, although it came late—maybe there's hopes for all of us.

We are rejoicing over a glorious rain we have had three dry seasons, I never knew how refreshing rain was until deprived of it. Wonderful warm winter, 80 degrees half of the time now it is spring, birds and coming, and oh, we saw a flock of robins last week.

Norway is certainly on the map, our Governor is doing all he can and when we return we will do all we can to "boost." We are great for that out here.

Wishing you and your paper a prosperous New Year—Elva Dorr, Pasadena, Cal.

Yes, Sullivan Did It

He brought Mellie Dunham out. Had it not been for his Lewiston Carnival Mellie would now have been at his Crockett Ridge Farm and unknown to fame and a big pocket book.

Sullivan did it. He started the fire and others put fuel to it and now Mellie and Gram are all the rage all over the country.

The N. N. Club was very pleasantly entertained at the home of the president, Mrs. Avis Davis, Thursday evening, Feb. 4. After the business and social hour the hostess served an oyster stew supper. Next meeting is with Mrs. Alice Blaquiere February 11.

Obituary

Mrs. Hattie Tubbs

Mrs. Hattie Tubbs died shortly before midnight, Sunday night, at the home of her son, Bert, at Woodfords, where she had spent the past few months. Mrs. Tubbs was the daughter of Calvin and Calista (Churchill) Richardson, and was born in Norway, April 21, 1854. She married Elhanan B. Tubbs, and they lived for years on a farm on Crockett Ridge.

Some fifteen years ago they moved into Norway village, and later, after the death of their son Bert's wife, went to Woodford's, to care for his household and children. Afterwards they returned to Norway, where Mr. Tubbs died April 19, 1918. Since his death, Mrs. Tubbs has made her home with her children, much of the time at Woodfords.

Mrs. Tubbs was an attendant at the Universalist Church, and was a member of the Heywood Club and Norway Grange.

She leaves five children, Mrs. Fred Noble of Norway; George T. Tubbs of Norway; Elhanan Bertrand Tubbs of Woodfords; Walter F. Tubbs of Burlington, Ct.; and Mrs. Tena Calista Barron of Norwood, Ohio. She is also survived by one sister, Mrs. Mellie Dunham, who has recently become famous as "Gram" Dunham, and one brother, Levi Richardson, both of Norway.

The funeral was held at the home of Fred Noble, at 2 o'clock, Tuesday afternoon.

Annual Clerks' Ball

The 32nd annual ball given by the Norway Clerks' Association at the Opera House, Tuesday evening proved one of the best gatherings for the winter. The balcony attendance was large and nearly two hundred people entered into the dances that had an order of sixteen numbers and two extras. Fox trots and waltzes predominated with a sprinkling of contras.

Music was furnishd by the Recreation Broadcasters of Portland, nine pieces, with Howard Shaw of South Paris was prompter. The orchestra rendered a high class concert before the march and circle was announced.

As usual the hall decorations were conspicuous with the colors French blue and dark pink in narrow ribbons festooned around the chandelier and about the balcony. The stage was elaborately decorated with ribbons and wide bands of the same colors which made an attractive picture.

The grand march was led by floor manager, Eugene A. Descoteau and wife followed by the aids, Perley May, Douglass Farrar, Herbert Butler, Paul F. Hosmer, Edward Burnell, Giles George, Paul L. Nevers, Edwin B. Dunn and ladies. Sixty couples formed on the march. Honorary aids were James N. Favor, R. H. Eastman, Fred S. Brown, Geo. F. Hill, Fred E. Smith, Z. L. Merchant and W. F. Knight.

Refreshments were served at intermission. Good bus service was provided South Paris patrons.

Veranda Club

Veranda Club met with Mrs. Florence Smith, Thursday evening, Feb. 4. Owing to bad weather the president, Miss Clara Ames and others were detained at home. Those present enjoyed a very pleasant evening. It was decided to hold a benefit card party at the home of Mrs. Rhoda McKay, Saturday evening, Feb. 13. After the business meeting the hostess served lunch. The next meeting will be Thursday evening, Feb. 18, with Mrs. Gertrude Stearns.

WILEY WEARY DANCE COMMENTS

W. A. Bicknell was an interested spectator at the clerks' ball last Tuesday evening. He told of the thrills, rythm and steps. Compared 'em with those of years back when he was an actor.

He didn't say there was degeneracy but did comment on the lack of zero weather clothing on some of the dancing beauties. This was at the Wearies.

John Woodman stopped whittling long enough to say that the modern superdressed, stylish female was much like a barbed wire fence: "It protected the property but didn't obstruct the view." It was so acclaimed and the quiet making of cedar shavings continued undisturbed.

D. Cromett Clark: "George R. Morton has done a worth-while thing in his statement of school expenses of Paris. I touched on the same subject when on the Advertiser."

From Stradivari to Mellie Dunham

Stradivari, in the 17th century, was responsible for the transition of the fiddle, known in medieval days, to the violin of today.

But it was for Mellie, the old fiddler of Maine, to bring a new fame to the master musical instrument of all time.

Who has not heard Mellie's violin express the deepest emotion and tenderest feeling? It can sob, laugh or suggest the wildest glee. Every tone-color, every musical effect is known to his violin.

Just as the violin is the perfect instrument in the realm of music, just so is the Norway Advertiser a perfect advertising medium that can be depended upon to produce results for unusual wants.

Let your wants be known to our readers. See Intelligence Column. Read it. Use it.—Stolen from the Brooklyn Daily Eagle of Feb. 5th.

Mellie Writes Cheerful Letter

Another week gone (Feb. 6). All well. The act is going fine.

Newark is a lively city. They gave us a big reception when we came in Monday.

We have had a hard storm this week. Several inches of snow with the wind blowing a gale. They are very busy hauling away the snow in trucks.

They seem to be afraid I won't last out the trip. They don't know the stuff the old people of Maine are made of.

Mellie and Gram.

Refused Ride in Splendid Car

When "Mellie" Dunham, Henry Ford's fiddler and "Gram," his wife, arrived in Newark from Philadelphia, they were met at the station by a big Rolls-Royce placed at their disposal by George F. Nanhen a banker of No. 4 Wall Street, Manhattan, who comes from "Mellie's" part of Maine.

The aged fiddler refused to ride in the big car, asking instead for one of a small, ubiquitous variety. "Whatever that Henry Ford has anything to do with is good enough for me," he added. "Gram" however, went away in the Rolls-Royce, saying that she had a Ford at home and could ride in that any time.

"Mellie" and "Gram" and their company were met at the station by a committee of city officials and prominent local men and were paraded through the downtown streets. Automobile dealers throughout that section of New Jersey joined in the celeebration, and on Wednesday they entertain "Mellie" at luncheon.

Maine's Champion Described by Our Special Philadelphia Correspondent

Last night I went to hear your friend, "Mellie" Dunham, the Maine fiddler, and after his act was over I went back stage and had a long visit with him.

And I thank you. For it was a rare treat to meet this little old man. I wish I could tell you how he appealed to me.

On the way down to the show I muttered a good deal for it was raining and the traffic clogged the highways of travel. I muttered some more after the show began, for there was an act I did not care much about. And this fiddler act I had come to see on your account did not appeal to me. But say—I forgot all that when they finally flashed the act on the stage. I felt like the old deacon of whom Kate Masterson wrote, who went to a vaudeville show in New York and then wrote back home—

"And it all was there before me like the picture to a pome,
When that feller that they called Van Bean
played Home Sweet Home"

The act took me back to my small town Missouri home. They had a corn dance scene done to life as true as the grass grows in the field.

The young folks trooped in and then came the old folks. And then came the famous old fiddler himself in his corduroy coat and his cap. He sat on a box up front and cuddled his fiddle under his chin and announced a quadrille and then began to play. The music swept across the house to me like a wind blowing through the leafless thickets of memory. It was the old come stuff, all right. Those young folks flashed through the mazes of that quadrille in a fashion fine to see. And the old folks did not do so bad.

Then "Mellie" Dunham got off his goods box and turned around once and waved his fiddle bow and announced a square dance. He had a caller beside him and this fellow spurred them to a high pitch. The boys got excited over their own dance and began to yell as they "passed their partners 'round." The girls got excited, too, and began to pat their hands to the music. The next was a waltz and then it was that I saw, true to life of the good old days, a middle aged couple dancing careful and far apart, and I saw also a young couple that was the star pair on the floor and they did fancy stuff galore. He was long legged and full of grace and vim and she was as light on her feet as a wind blown leaf in the moonlight.

But the best of all was the jig! Those old timers, men and women, that "Mellie" Dunham had brought with him from his home town of Norway, Maine, went after that jig hook, line and sinker and then dragged the fishing boa tout to sea. Dunham sawed his fiddle with fervor indescribable and inspired the orchestra until the music had the whole house weaving in their seats and beating time. It was a thriller, that jig!

Now, mind you, just before the fiddler act went on they had a Russian dance act that was supposed to be high class and the real thing in the poetry of motion. But to the tune of that old Maine fiddle those girls who had been taught dancing in the Boston school of profes-

Putting Teeth in Separator Claims

TALK is cheap, and it is easy to make extravagant claims. This is true of cream separator claims. If there is the slightest doubt in your mind which separator really does skim cleanest, just try this simple test:

Put a De Laval side-by-side with any other separator of approximate capacity. Your De Laval Agent will gladly arrange this test. Mix 20 gallons of milk thoroughly and let it stay At normal room temperature of 70 degrees. Run half through each machine. Wash the bowl and tinware of each machine in its own skim-milk. Then run the De Laval skim-milk through the other machine and vice versa. Weigh and test for butter-fat the cream that each gets from the other's skim-milk. When you do this you will know beyond doubt that the De Laval skims cleaner, is easier to turn and more profitable to own.

The new De Laval is the best cream separator ever made. It has the wonderful "floating" bowl—the greatest separator improvement in 25 years. It is guaranteed to skim cleaner, run easier and last longer. It is the crowning achievement of 48 years of separator manufacture and leadership.

Liberal trade allowances made on old separators.

WATERPOWER S

ADDRESS GIVEN BY W. S. W
OF SPECIAL INTEREST T

"More than fifty million dollars we be spent in power development in Ma within a very few years if the law wi prohibits transmission of power out the state were repealed," W. S. Wym president of the New England Pu Service Company and Central Maine P er Company, told the session of the Ma State Grange.

"Maine's power market is in the rection of Massachusetts," the spe stated, "but other sections of the c try have their eyes on this market. Maine does not take immediate actio develop its water powers and reach market it will be another generation two before it will be possible to do thing with our resources. We will twenty or thirty million dollars in ta five times that amount in return from dustrial developments, and cheap p —perhaps at one-half the cost of generated from developments which exist in the state. I think this is a rious question and one which should our immediate attention as citizen Maine, and if possible should have im diate action by our legislature," said Wyman.

Speaking as a lifelong member of Grange, a native of Maine, and "whose fortune, good or bad, is i tricably bound up in the prosperity Maine," W. S. Wyman called atten to the interest Central Maine P Company is taking in bringing elec ty to the rural sections of the state. urged a special act of the legislatur soon as possible to create a "Rural tric Project" to reduce the expens rural line extensions. "Under pr conditions actual power production is but a small part of service cost farmers. The greater part of the c due to taxes, depreciation and in on the investment," Mr. Wyman plained.

The act suggested by Mr. Wy would provide that electric light panies file a description of rural with the Public Utilities Commission, ject to approval by the commissio lines would not be subject to taxa reducing 1-5 of the cost of serving try sections. This special act s also provide for issuing some for security for a long term of maturity ing a 4 per cent. or 5 per cent. ra interest. He also suggested the rig eminent domain be given electric companies, as is given telephone panies.

"If such a rural electric project were passed by the legislature, C Maine Power Company would extend eral hundred miles of service within next year or two," Mr. Wyman cluded. "We would hope to be a cut down the cost of future service farmer perhaps one-third, and this make it possible to serve a great m of farm homes at something very cl the rate enjoyed by people in the tow

Life Work in Maine

"I was born in this state in a fa community and joined the grange as as I was old enough. I have live worked in Maine for more than years. Nearly everything that I h the world is invested in Maine pe and so I want to say to you once that in talking about our water p and other matters connected with I am speaking as an individual whole future fortune, good or bad, extricably bound up in the prosper Maine.

"A situation has been reached development of New England and e tricity in New England where that it is of great importance that as is possible everyone should have idea of what is going on and w may mean or may not mean to Ma

The Law of 1909

"For about fifteen years we ha a law on our statute books against mitting electricity generated by power outside the state. This la passed in 1909 on the theory that had a tremendous amount of undev power, (I think old figures used t Maine third place among the sta the United States in the amount developed power, New York comin and California second) and that prevented this power from being out of Maine in the form of elec then the manufacturers of New E would of necessity come here to and that Maine would rapidly gr a great manufacturing state. A deal has been said by the advoc this law to the effect that Maine not be a mere power station for of New England. We have not even that, however, and the law been responsible for location in M a single manufacturer. This l been in force a little more than years, during the most of which has done no great harm. Econom ditions were such that in all pro no transmission line of any size have been built to take power from to Massachusetts.

Nearly Two Billion Kilowatt-Ho developed in Kennebec

"On the Upper Kennebec, wit I am much more familiar than w other rivers, there can be develo proximately one billion two thousand kilowatt-hours annually storage is created to equalize the the river and if complete control tained, nearly half a billion of h hours of additional useful power developed on the dams now exis the lower river. In other word possible for the Kennebec River fully developed and to have its brought so completely under con storage that something more th and a half billion additional k hours can be developed by it, electricity to supply the additi quirements of the State of Main period of fifty years and on t three rivers it is possible to devel than as much again.

"In other words, we have at Maine enough undeveloped water to take care of our own needs, a they do not increase faster than t in the last decade, for a period hundred years.

Maine Losing Million Dollars i Each Year

"The development of the upper bec alone and the building of tr sion lines sufficient to carry the to the western Maine border, w the only direction in which a mar be found, would call for an inv of somewhere from sixty to sev million dollars. This money wo be invested in taxable property never could move out of the S Maine. If it paid only a state was valued about as other pro valued in Maine for taxation p it would mean from three to fi derd thousand dollars each yea into the State Treasury. On th hand, a great deal of this property be situated in incorporated tow would pay more tax than that. chances are that the state and to gether would receive nearly one dollars per year for taxes. As that this property is all to be de at the end of fifty years, that be average of no development now development one hundred years fr then we are losing a million d year for fifty years, or fifty mill

WATERPOWER SITUATION IN MAINE

ADDRESS GIVEN BY W. S. WYMAN BEFORE THE STATE GRANGE OF SPECIAL INTEREST TO MAINE AND MAINE PEOPLE

"More than fifty million dollars would be spent in power development in Maine within a very few years if the law which prohibits transmission of power out of the state were repealed," W. S. Wyman, president of the New England Public Service Company and Central Maine Power Company, told the session of the Maine State Grange.

"Maine's power market is in the direction of Massachusetts," the speaker stated, "but other sections of the country have their eyes on this market. If Maine does not take immediate action to develop its water powers and reach this market it will be another generation or two before it will be possible to do anything with our resources. We will lose twenty or thirty million dollars in taxes, five times that amount in return from industrial developments, and cheap power —perhaps at one-half the cost of that generated from developments which now exist in the state. I think this is a serious question and one which should have our immediate attention as citizens of Maine, and if possible should have immediate action by our legislature," said Mr. Wyman.

Speaking as a lifelong member of the Grange, a native of Maine, and one "whose fortune, good or bad, is inextricably bound up in the prosperity of Maine," W. S. Wyman called attention to the interest Central Maine Power Company is taking in bringing electricity to the rural sections of the state. He urged a special act of the legislature as soon as possible to create a "Rural Electric Project" to reduce the expense of rural line extensions. "Under present conditions actual power production cost is but a small part of service costs to farmers. The greater part of the cost is due to taxes, depreciation and interest on the investment," Mr. Wyman explained.

The act suggested by Mr. Wyman would provide that electric light companies file a description of rural lines with the Public Utilities Commission. Subject to approval by the commission the lines would not be subject to taxation, reducing 1-5 of the cost of serving country sections. This special act should also provide for issuing some form of security for a long term of maturity bearing a 4 per cent. or 5 per cent. rate of interest. He also suggested the right of eminent domain be given electric light companies, as is given telephone companies. This million dollars per year would not be paid by citizens of this state, or at least a large part of it would not, only that part which represents the power sold in Maine, but so far as the power sold outside of Maine goes would be paid by citizens of other states. Can we afford this kind of luxury?

Losing Industrial Investments

"We are losing out in another way. Last summer the engineer of one of the biggest chemical companies in the world came to Maine. He was looking for a place where the company which he represents could establish a factory. Such a factory as that company has in mind would consume a great deal of power. He wanted something like eighteen thousand continuous horse power for the first unit and he had to have it at a very low price. The price was so low and the quantity so great that it could not be furnished from any existing development in the state. It would be possible, however, to furnish it from one of the large undeveloped powers on the upper Kennebec, if the surplus power over and above that taken by this company could be sold. There is no assurance, however, that this surplus could be sold in the state and no one cares to take the chance of building a plant at a cost of fifteen or twenty million dollars and selling one-quarter or one-third the output at a cost that would pay only one-quarter or one-third of the fixed charges and taking a chance of selling the balance or going into bankruptcy.

"The result was that this particular company went elsewhere and the State of Maine lost an immediate investment of four or five million dollars and a future investment of twice as much more, or, putting the matter in the terms of state tax, it lost a hundred thousand dollars a year for many years to come. Now, picture if you will, the situation if this big hydro electric power were already built and supplying its surplus power outside the state. The owners would then be able to say to a customer seeking a large supply of cheap power, 'Yes, we can furnish this power and furnish it as soon as you get your mill ready. We won't have to take three or four years to erect a tremendous dam. All we will have to do is to give our out of state customers a short notice and begin supplying this power to you when you are ready.'

If a Similar Law Affected Agricultural Produce

"Just suppose that it were against the law for any farmer in Maine to ship his potatoes that his own family could not consume or that could not be sold in his own town to Boston or some other point for sale. How many men in Maine do you think would raise more potatoes than they themselves would use? Suppose it were against the law to ship lumber out of the state in any form. Would it not then be likely that our timber would be growing on every hand that it would be almost impossible to keep the settled part of state in cleared land rather than in woods? But all products of the soil, not only as in the case of timber not easily replaced, but in the case of potatoes or any other product take away elements from the soil which can never be replaced, while water power runs on forever and will be as available a hundred years after development as when new, as in the Kennebec River or the Penobscot River or the Androscoggin River, a million years from today as it is today. I think this is a serious question and one which should have our immediate attention as citizens of Maine and if possible should have immediate action by our legislature.

Danger of Losing Market

"As I told you in the beginning, only within a few years has it been commercially feasible to transmit our surplus power to Massachusetts where the only possible market lies. It probably is feasible to do it today, certainly to transmit a part of it there, but other sections of the country have their eyes on the market in Massachusetts. There is two million horse power awaiting development on the St. Lawrence River. There is seven million horse power ready for development in the Province of Ontario and there is another seven million in the Province of Quebec. There are more than two million horse power available in New York outside of the St. Lawrence River and the owners of these powers are all of them awake to the fact that they must find a market and are trying to work out a market in Massachusetts. If any one of them captures that market and sells the billion or billon and a half kilowatthours that are now being made in that state by steam, Maine may have to nurse her undeveloped rivers for a generation or two before it will be possible to do anything with them. We may lose ten or twenty or thirty million dollars that we might have in taxes. We may lose five times that amount that we might have in return on investment which we may make in them and we may lose the opportunity to get the industries which would come to Maine if cheap power were developed and awaiting them. Please bear in mind that by cheap power I mean power at perhaps one-half the cost of most of the developments which now exist in the state. The big powers, particularly on the Upper Kennebec, if adequately equipped with storage, can develop energy for one-half or less than one-half the cost per kilowatt-hour on such plants as the one on the Androscoggin river that the Central Maine Power Company are now building or of most other plants in the state.

The Rural Situation

"The other matter which I want to speak to you particularly about is the question of electricity in rural districts in Maine. The situation here is no different from that all over the country. Electric light and power companies have found it difficult and almost impossible to get electricity to the farmer at a price at which he can afford to use it. In some of the western states, notably Wisconsin, a schedule of prices has been made up which would make it utterly impossible for any farmer that I know of in Maine to have electricity. Here in this state a good deal has been done.

"I rather pride myself that the territory occupied by the Central Maine Power Company has more completely supplied its farm roads with electricity than any other territory east of the Mississippi River. But here the situation is not satisfactory from your point of view. There are miles and miles of country roads where there are no lights and no electric power. There are hundreds and hundreds of homes that need electricity. I think we have applications at our office in Augusta now from over 3000 people who want electricity and to whom under existing conditions we cannot see our way clear to supply it. Now the cost of supplying electricity to a customer, whether he is in the country or in the city is very largely made up of interest, taxes and depreciation. It isn't the cost of the electricity itself at the power house that makes the trouble, but the interest, taxes and depreciation on the lines which take that electricity from the power house out into the country to the farm house. In the case of the farmer those fixed charges are much higher than for the town dweller, because it takes so much more line to reach a given number of customers. They don't make the town or the state a cent of expense; they do not require any sidewalks or schools or sewers or anything of the sort; they may disfigure the landscape a little, but we are glad to have them. Thinking along this line I have this definite suggestion to make and I am going to keep on making it until I get the answer from somebody. It is this:

"Rural Electric Project" Act Suggested

"That a special act of the Maine Legislature be passed as quickly as possible creating what I would call for lack of a better name "The Rural Electric Project." I would have this act provide that any electric light company doing business in Maine might file with the Public Utilities Commission a description of rural electric lines which it owned or which it proposed to build and which, if approved by the Commission, would thence forth be known as Rural Project No. 1 or No. 2 or whatever the number might be. If this Rural Electric Project is approved by the Commission, then the poles and wires and all other property used in connection with it by the Company will not be subject to taxation. This would remove about 1-5 of the cost of serving the country line and would not cost anyone a cent because these lines cannot be built by the Company under the present conditions. I would also have this special act provide for the issuance of some form of security by the companies to provide funds for building these lines and I would provide that these securities bear a lower rate of interest than some others put out by the company. I would make them very long term, running perhaps for a hundred years before maturity and bearing interest at a rate not exceeding 5% and if it could be cut down to 4% so much the better. Much of the money obtained by the company for the purpose of their business now costs them around 7%, so you can see that if the interest rate were cut down to 4%, nearly one-half of the interest cost could be saved and yet the investor would get as much for his money as he does in the bank. In addition to this, I would have the Legislature give those rural projects the right of eminent domain in the same way that the telephone companies have it, in order to assist in cutting down the cost of consumption.

Many Rural Projects Would Be Undertaken Soon

"So far as the Central Maine Power Company is concerned I am ready to say here today that if such legislation existed our Company would endeavor to build several hundred miles of these rural projects during the next year or two and would hope by that very large scale of building to obtain a lower cost of these lines and through the medium of freedom from taxation on them, of a lower rate of interest and of possible lower cost by doing the thing on a wholesale basis to cut down the cost of service to the farmer perhaps one-third what it is now and this might make it possible to serve a great number of farm homes at something very close to the rate now enjoyed by people in the city.

Let Maine Lead The Way

"No state in the country has as yet succeeded in working out a plan by which a large part of its country roads can be furnished with electricity. If we in Maine can be the first to do this and can really say to the rest of the country that electricity for light and power is available on hundreds of miles of farm roads, it will be a long step towards making life on our farms pleasant and desirable and Maine will have once more demonstrated her right to the motto which she has so proudly borne since the beginning.

Call For Immediate Action

"These two matters should have immediate action. It is now known that Maine no longer holds anywhere near the third place in amount of undeveloped power. At least ten other states have more than we have. They are moving rapidly for the development of storage and are making available to those interested all the facilities possible for early and complete development. Power stations capable of producing immense quantities of cheap power are being built rapidly in the South and West. These communities are daily becoming more and more competitors with Maine and the rest of New England as locations for manufacturers. If this present generation is to see a full development of its water powers and of the state and is to get a part of the benefits which will accrue from them, the law prohibiting the sale of our surplus power outside the state should be repealed at a special session of the legislature held during the present winter and capital invited to proceed with the development.

$50,000,000 Waiting To Be Spent In Maine

"There is no guarantee that even this will result in such development. It must depend upon the financial problems which have to be worked out. In repealing this law, however, we are taking a long step towards assuring early results and I firmly believe that if the law of 1909 were repealed, more than fifty million dollars would be spent in power development in Maine within a very few years. In the same way I need not tell you that the farm situation is critical; that you should have electricity in your homes and I believe that the rural electric project which I have so fully outlined here has in it possibilities of making electricity available to a great many of you."

The Junior supper and entertainment Wednesday evening was a decided success. The seating capacity being stretched to its uttermost. The entertainment that followed the usual bounteous supper was given entirely by the Doll Shop" was given by the girls, customers, Clara Adkins and Virginia Frost, came to buy and Miss Pearman, the keeper of the shop, exhibited her dolls, each one giving a recitation, song or dance. The dolls were Anna Holt, old fashioned doll; Lila Emerson, Dutch doll; Constance Young, winter; Carlene Currier, Japanese; Adeline Emerson, Margaret Crooker, Negros; Ernestine Hutchins, boy doll; Maxine Richardson, the Flapper; Millie Morse and Edith Holt, baby dolls; Margaret Hill, the French doll, who executed a very clever toe dance. Each "doll" being dressed appropriate for the part they represented.

The second play was Daniel Boone in three acts. Daniel Boone, Nolan Jackson; Kenton, Junior Smith; Pioneers, Rexford Waite, Robert Frost, Edward Holt and Leslie Pike; Wilson, Paul Brown; Indians, Ira Smith, Warren Berry and Frank Morse. Each and every part was given in a very creditable manner, showing much work and patience on the part of Miss Pearman, who had entire charge of the affair. Music between acts was furnished by Glenn McIntire, piano solos and Clara Adkins, violin solo.

TWIN TOWN NATURE CLUB

Presents National Geographic to High Schools of Norway and South Paris

The Twin Town Nature Club held its February meeting Monday night at the home of Mrs. F. E. Decoster on Highland Ave. Mrs. Linnie Bartlett assisted in entertaining and it was one of the most social and instructive evenings in the history of the club. Records of the last meeting were read by the secretary, Flora Murch, also a friendly and pleasing letter from Prin. Fuller of South Paris in acknowledgement of a year's subscription to the National Geographic Magazine, sent by the club to the high schools of the Twin Towns. The roll call, "Nature Observations" answered by the twenty-five members present brought out many strange and interesting experiences.

The president, A. D. Park, was in his wittiest mood and filled in with personal experiences, anecdotes and quotations. Geo. Howe in an informal talk, reported a bald eagle seen from the hill top and told many rare happenings among his bird neighbors. Other birds reported by members were pine and evening grosbeaks, nuthatches, tree sparrows, chickadees, snow buntings, redpolls, goldfinches, blue jays, crows, sharp shinned hawk, woodpeckers, a robin wintering in South Paris and a strange visitor seen near the home of Mrs. Lucy Dow, thought to be a Lapland Longspur. Mrs. John Hall of Oxford brought specimens of heather and trailing yew found in Washington County.

F. H. Cummings displayed banana blossoms and a strange sponge sent him by Mrs. John Swain from Tarpon Springs, the largest sponge fisheries in the world. The material and construction of a redstart's nest was studied and several bird houses made and exhibited by Ray Frost were much appreciated. Mrs. A. D. Park told of a disabled horned lark which recovered in her home and in the mean time learned to know her voice, listening intently when she called his name. Mrs. Fred Cummings read The Deserted Road, a recent poem by "our own Stanley Foss Bartlett." Several new names were proposed for membership and the program closed with the following poem read by Mrs. Caldwell of Oxford.

The Little Cares

The little cares that fretted me,
I lost them yesterday
Among the fields above the sea,
Among the winds at play;
Among the lowing of the herds,
The rustling of the trees;
Among the singing of the birds,
The humming of the bees.
The foolish fears of what may happen—
I cast them all away
Among the clover-scented grass,
Among the new-mown hay;
Among the husking of the corn
Where drowsy poppies nod,
Where ill thoughts die and good are born,
Out in the fields with God.

—E. B. BROWNING.

Newell Andrews and son, Charlie of Bisbeetown were balcony spectators at the Clerks' Ball, Tuesday evening. They hiked over that day and returned home Wednesday by the same conveyance.

Mr. and Mrs. Aretas E. Stearns and Albert Beliveau of Rumford were among the dancers at the Clerks' Ball.

Mrs. Eva Blake and Mrs. Charles Woodcock of South Paris visited Ina Wilberger one day last week, also Theodore McAllister and Dorothy Stackpole of Lovell.

The clerks cleared about $75.00 from the ball, Tuesday evening. The gross receipts were the largest of any in the past five years and by cutting down expenses, a neat sum was realized for a beginning next year.

Chas. A. Richardson of market fame has got in a barrel of tongues and sounds. He thought we needed 'em so as to catch the news. He may be right, but we are not going to accept all of them as our paper wouldn't be large enough to contain all the news we might get. See! Hence Richardson is over loaded with "tongues and sounds."

Mrs. F. H. Beck has gone to Boston for treatment. Miss Doris Bradley went with her. Length of stay unknown.

V. Akers, the Norway artist, is working in an art studio on East Huron Street in Chicago. He is not expected to return for several weeks.

The women of Mooseheart Legion met at Moose Hall Tuesday evening, Feb. 9, for regular business. A social for the Moose and Legionaires will be held after the regular meeting of February 23. The social committee appointed were Addie Olmstead, Hazel McAllister and Sadie Pennock.

Use window shades to tone the light

In order to produce pleasing tones in a room, light, shadows and color must blend together. By using window shades of a special blending color, not ordinary green or white, you can tone the sunlight, just as you do lamplight. This toned sunlight spreads a lovely mellowness over the room, making your furnishings look richer and lovelier.

How decorators select window shades

Decorators who wish to use window shades of one color to harmonize with the exterior and another to tone with the interior are delighted with the new Twi-tone combinations in

Columbia WINDOW SHADES and ROLLERS

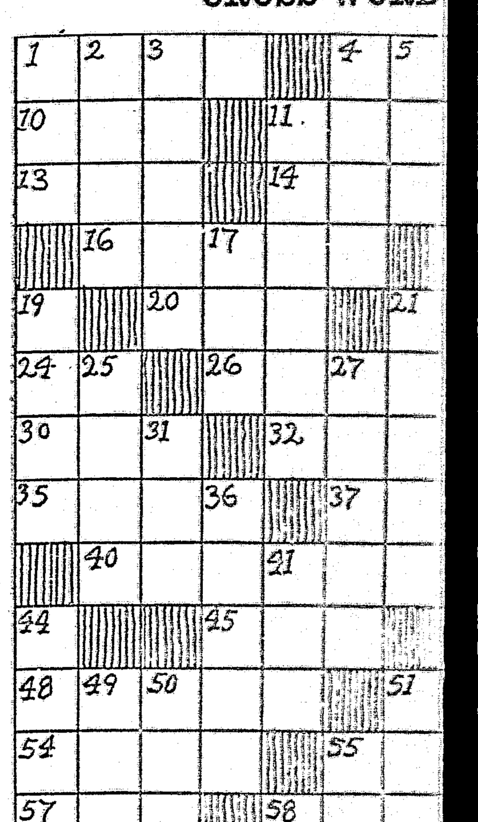

These new Twi-tone shades are made with a different color on each side so that you may make color selections to harmonize with furnishings in various rooms without changing the exterior color. We have these shades in a variety of color combinations. Ask to see them the next time you come in.

EAST STONEHAM

Ancient and Modern Supper—Pythian Sisters Meet Round the Stove.

The Ladies' Circle gave an "Ancient and Modern" supper in the church vestry, Thursday evening, Feb. 4, and in spite of the snow and wind, there were between sixty and seventy present. The Ancient table was covered with red table cloths and lighted with candles and at this table you were served the following menu: baked beans with brown and graham bread, pickles, doughnuts, molasses cookies, apple pie, mince pie and coffee. The waitresses at this table were dressed in old fashioned costumes. The Modern table was covered with white table cloths and lighted with Aladdin lamps, three vases of artificial flowers added a touch of color. At this table you weer served to the following menu by two ladies dressed in the fashion of the present day and wearing white frilly aprons: scalloped potatoes, fruit, salmon and vegetable salads, white bread and butter, lemon, custard and whipped cream pie and all kinds of fancy cakes and coffee. After the supper all stayed and enjoyed the games and singing. On the evening of February 18th, several of the men of the church are going to serve an oyster stew and baked bean supper at the vestry.

Mrs. Edith O'Connell and young daughter, Alice, have returned from Worcester, Mass.

J. M. Bartlett has a cocoanut on exhibition at his store and it is quite a curiosity to most of us as it is in its outside case, just as it came off the tree. It was sent to Mrs. Bartlett from a girl friend at Palm Beach, Fla.

Six Pythian Sisters braved the wind of Friday evening and assembled in their lodge rooms for their regular meeting but as it takes seven to make a quorum and the necessary one did not appear, they could not hold a meeting but a most enjoyable hour was passed. All gathered around the stove and while they ate the refreshments brought by one of the committee on refreshments the ladies settled the affairs of the nation. Mrs. Hazel Files furnished a mystery box, which was drawn by Mrs. Mildred Bartlett, it proved to be a very elaborate and highly colored holder.

We had an extra good attendance at the Sunday service which was conducted by Rev. Mr. Bull, assisted by our regular pastor, Rev. J. F. Thurston. Mr. Thurston has been away for several weeks, taking a much needed rest and we are all glad to welcome him back much rested and improved in health. Mrs. Mary Reyner presided at the organ while Otis Cobb accompanied her with his violin, this added greatly to the enjoyment of the service and we trust Mr. Cobb will favor us often with his playing.

Mr. and Mrs. Winfield McAllister and baby of North Waterford spent Sunday with their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo Brown.

Surprise Party Given in Dixfield—Laites Plan to Settle in Florida.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Lane and two sons, Harold and Ray, Mrs. Hugh Fleck, Mr. and Mrs. Elias Jacobs and Mr. and Mrs. Alton Stiles were in Dixfield, Tuesday evening, Feb. 2, when they gave a surprise party to Mrs. Lane's sister, Mrs. Shirley Widbur, in honor of her birthday. Cards and music were enjoyed and splendid refreshments served.

Mrs. Eddie Jodrie entertained the Christmas Club, Thursday evening, Feb. 4th.

Francis Putnam, oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Putnam, entertained several friends at supper on his fifteenth birthday, Tuesday, Feb. 2.

The Ladies' Farm Bureau will meet with Mrs. Bessie Holt, Thursday, Feb. 11, for an all day millinery meeting under the direction of Miss Gladys Page, H. D. A., and Mrs. Martha Spaulding, millinery project leader. A basket dinner with hot coffee furnished by the hostess will be enjoyed.

Mrs. Blanche Laite and three children, Isabelle, Winnifred and Theodore, are staying with Mrs. Laite's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Zeph Whynaught, while Mr. Laite is in Florida. He is employed by the A. W. The one thing for which the world always shows profound indifference is the other fellow's grievance.

The Oxford County United Parish

Did you ever think that the weeks go around pretty fast? We used to think so, but now that we are supposed to have something about the United Parish in the Norway Advertiser every week we know so. This week it is two weeks so we can just touch the high spots. There are three "Circles" that we will have to tell you about. The first was the men's supper that was given by the men of the Flat, the 28th of January. We think we can say given, rightly, for it was not an effort that was rewarded with financial success. It was a rough and stormy night, but a good crowd gathered for a good time. The social time was enjoyed as well as the oysters, but when the receipts were counted up, well, where were they. The next Wednesday they had a little extra "Circle" at East Stoneham. The affair was in charge of the president and the vice president of the ladies' organization, Mrs. Bartlett and Mrs. Bickford. The supper was a sort of two in one affair. They had an old time table, looking ancient in furnishings and fare; and they had a modern table that was dressed in an up-to-date style with the late dishes to eat. It was a very happy occasion, and those present were glad to think they had braved the storm to be present. The last of these three was held this week, Tuesday, when the men of North Waterford entertained. The chairman, Ralph B. Knight, was ably assisted by Messrs. George Holt, Frank Pike and Wilbur Bull. The supper was followed by a pleasing entertainment and sing. We overheard some of the ladies saying that the men did pretty well.

On the last two Sundays services have been carried out as usual, with the exception of the service last Sunday at Albany, which was omitted on account of hard travelling and some sickness. Rev. J. F. Thurston returned week before last from his recent leave of absence. On the following Sunday afternoon he conducted the service at North Waterford, and assisted last Sunday in the services at that place and at East Stoneham. His many friends are glad to see him around once more, and hope his recovery will be quick and complete. In the matter of attendance the interest still continues in the numbers present at the Sunday school at the Flat, and at the service of worship at East Stoneham. Both of these services deserve especial mention, as they are considerably above the former average. It is very encouraging also to hear of the generous support that has been given the Sunday school at the Flat by some of its absent friends. The increased expense of the new plans for the school has been well provided for by their generosity.

The staff of the United Parish met on Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mr. Bull. Many plans and several coming events were discussed. Among the events slated in the near future are The United Parish Council meeting and the first winter carnival of the parish. Both are expected to come during the first week in March. So the good things are not all in the past, but these two together with the men's supper next Thursday evening at East Stoneham remind us that there are still many good times awaiting our interest.

EAST WATERFORD

Robert Sanderson, who is a student at North Bridgton, is enjoying an attack of the mumps at his cousin's Mr. and Mrs. Frank Shaw's, Blackguard and is reported as gaining rapidly. He is staying with his cousins as his parents and grandmothers have not had the mumps.

The next meeting of the Ladies' Farm Bureau will meet at the Community Hall, Waterford, Feb. 19 at 10 o'clock.

G. L. Hilton, who is serving on the grand jury and Wilson Morse as traverse juror, left for Paris, Tuesday morning.

Miss Helen M. Sanderson, director of Camp McWain for girls, is spending the winter in Cincinnati, Ohio, conducting nutrition classes in the public schools along the same lines as those which have proved so successful at the camp. These classes are under the general direction of Dr. Emerson of Boston, whose work with underweight children is meeting with marked success.

ORIGINAL BASS ISLAND MEMBERS

M. W. Sampson recently found among papers of the late Capt. W. W. Whitmarsh, a list of the original members of the Bass Island Club. It was organized July 1, 1879. The camp was formally opened a year later.

The members were: Clarence M. Smith, W. W. Whitmarsh, Enoch W. Clement, Geo. A. Gunn, Sanford H. Walcott, E. Wright Bisbee, Geo. A. Cole, Elias H. Woodsum and James Danforth, all of Norway

None of the original members are now living.

Regular meeting of the Abigail Whitman Chapter, D. A. R., was held with Mrs. Herbert Andrews, Wednesday evening, Feb. 3rd. Roll call was answered by many bright anecdotes of Lincoln. Alternates, Mrs. Sadie Martin, Mrs. Alice Fuller, Mrs. Evis Cook and Mrs. Harriette Brown. A fine program was given on Washington's life by Mrs. Harriette Brown. Emma A. Sanborn of Buxton Dead—Grange Notes.

According to reports we were greatly favored in the storm of Thursday as it was only an ordinary storm, the mail coming as usual.

News of the death of Emma A. Sanborn of Buxton was received the past week. For several years she worked at her cousin's, Walter Sanborn's and became well known as a worker in the Sunday school and grange.

The grange held a well attended meeting Friday evening notwithstanding the wind blow. Three applications were voted on and accepted. A fine program of current events by every one was enjoyed, also piano solo with encore; stories and connundrums. A lunch of sandwiches, coffee, etc., was enjoyed, games played. There will be work in the 1st and 2nd degrees at the next meeting with more work in sight. The next year seems to be opening up very auspiciously.

Warren is sawing wood around the neighborhood with his Fordson tractor.

John Gilman is working with Millard Sanborn in the woods on his place.

Ada Harnden is visiting at Wm. Berry's. All the sick ones seem to be improving.

Paris School Expenses

MR. MORTON'S ARTICLE STARTS NATIVE OF TOWN TO ASKING QUESTIONS

Mr. Morton's review of Paris school expenses proved very interesting to me not only because it general theme vitally appeals to me, but because I am a native of South Paris and my first school going, half a cenutry ago, was in the basement primary room of the former two-story school building in that village.

He gives figures on scholars, which shows the decline in the size of families. There were 977 scholars in 1875, and 785 in 1925. With an increase of 50 per cent (659 to 989) in the number of polls there is a decrease of 20 per cent in the number of scholars.

What is meant by scholars? Is it the number "drawing school money" as the expression is? If so, the age has been changed, having been from 4 to 20 years inclusive in 1875, and no being 6 (?) to 20 (?) inclusive. If the present rating was on the old basis, it would not only show a smaller decline in the number of children, but also a smaller ratio of in crease in the cost of schoolin per child.

Maybe, by "scholars" is meant the number attending school. This is hardly probable, for the numbers look excessive, though I will not make any assertion on the subject.

It is about 30 years since the State of Maine abolished the old school districts, and put everybody in a town on the same basis. Formerly the rural schools that had more than 20 weeks of schooling per year were in a minority. The argument used before the Legislature when the change was made was that the villages could be taxed more, and the whole town keep the schools up to the standard of the villages, giving all the children 30 or more weeks of schooling each year. It made a big increase in the cost.

The South Paris Village district used to raise an extra school tax in order to have three terms of school per year. Has Mr. Morton got that in his table? Perhaps Paris Hill, or West Paris, or some other district did the same. If so, is that in Mr. Morton's table? If he has not included such figures, they would show a larger cost 50 years ago, and less actual multiplying of expense.

If a country rural school had 14 scholars nine weeks in the summer and 20 scholars eleven weeks in the winter, it had an attendance of 346 individual school weeks. If that same school now has 11 scholars, 33 weeks, it means an attendance of 363 individual school weeks. I know that a situation like this exists in some towns, and infer that it may exist in Paris.

Children stay in school longer. It would be interesting to take the attendance in Paris, week by week for the year, and see whether there are more or fewer individual school weeks in a year than there were half a century ago.

The high school pupil costs more than the pupil in a lower grade or in a rural school, and the big increase in high school attendance means a preportionately bigger increase in school cost. I remember when the whole of Oxford County did not have one high school which would be rated in Class A under the present Maine classification.

Are too many things being taught in the high schools? That is for the voters and the parents at the polls to say.

Fifty years ago, parents bought the school books for the children. It would tell one entire item of the increase, if Mr. Morton should specify the amount expended for books in 1925.

The town pupils used their own slates and slate pencils in my school days. Now the town provides paper and with it lead pencils. Shortly before I left Oxford County in 1901 and ceased by semi-weekly (or even more frequent) visits to South Paris, it happened that not one of a group of boys about 10 years old would bother to pick up a five-cent pencil which I had thrown on the sidewalk in front of "Dayt" Bolster's store, in order to test a statement by Mr. Bolster that they would not. He was right, and his explanation was also correct, when he said that the children thought nothing of pencils as long as they could get them at school for nothing. That expense for paper and pencils was unknown in 1875.

The country school teacher used to be her own janitor. With the more costly modern schoolhouses, more expensive caretaking is necessitated.

Country school teachers used to work for $2 to $3 per week. The time came when young women could get other work that paid better, and a steady job, with 40 to 50 weeks of work a year instead of 20 to 25 weeks. Also according to more than one former school teacher who used to work in the shoe factory at Norway, that work was easier, and with shorter hours than she ever had as a school teacher. They were the kind who went over each day's lessons the night before, and also had some written work that required revising. One such teacher, from whom it was my privilege to have learned, was a legal resident of Paris. Once, the smartest young women taught school, now the school officials worry about getting good teachers.

Formerly, the schoolhouse repairs were done by the men of the district having a bee, and painting, shingling, etc. When the schools were transferred from the districts to the towns, the former district people felt that the town should attend to such repairs, with the result that taxes must be levied to pay the cost of regular painters at regular wages.

My own feelings may be stated in a general way, to the effect that we, here in Massachusetts, as well as my former neighbors in Maine, are asking the schools to do things which parents ought themselves to do for their children. I have broached that idea repeatedly and each time aroused a furore of opposition from parents, who wanted their children to receive such things from the schools instead of the homes. Yet it explains much of the figures given by Mr. Morton.

If the people keep unloading things on the government, not merely schooling but other things, we may come to the point where government itself will break down from the combination of cumbersomeness and cost.

In the case of the schools, the situation is complicated by the fact that the man of fifty years ago could go into the world on an even basis with other men if he had the education of those days. The young men of today must have much of this newer school training for without it he cannot meet others on equal terms.

SOUTH PARIS NEWS

OBSERVED FIFTIETH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

On Tuesday of this week Mr. and Mrs. Albert W. Walker of South Paris celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage. The event was observed informally and in the evening. The home was open to friends and many callers to offer congratulations. A short program was given.

A sketch of Mr. and Mrs. Walker in the Oxford Democrat is here reproduced:

Mr. and Mrs. Walker were both residents of the town of Denmark when their marriage took place on the 9th of February, 1876. Mrs. Walker was before marriage Miss Jennie Lord, daughter of Albion and Olive (Wentworth) Lord. Her father died when she was sixteen and she began teaching school to help out the family income. Mr. Walker went to Boston when eighteen years of age, and there was in the employ of ice companies for some time. Indeed, after their marriage for a while he worked at the ice business in Boston in the summer and taught school in the winter. Later they lived on the farm belonging to Mrs. Walker's mother.

They were married at Cornish on the 9th of February, 1876, by Rev. Albert Cole. They had a somewhat memorable experience of our New England weather as from Cornish they drove to Standish, and a big storm coming on they were snowbound for three days before they could get home.

In the fall of 1886 Mr. Walker purchased of the late S. F. Briggs the ice business at South Paris, and the next spring the family moved to South Paris, where they have ever since lived. A few years later Mr. Walker also purchased the ice business in Norway, and for a considerable time did all or most of the ice business for the two towns. After some years he sold the ice business, but in the mean time had gone into other lines. He was in the coal business, dealt in masons' supplies, was agent for the Standard Oil Co., and has for years done a large business in agricultural implements of all kinds, did various contract jobs, and so on. His son, Percy M. Walker, was associated with him in business under the firm name of A. W. Walker & Son, and the business was incorporated under the same name some years ago. Percy M. Walker is now running a lumber mill at North Newry. Mr. Walker's son-in-law, Robert E. Wise, is associated with him in the business. The Walker plant covers a considerable area in the western part of the village.

Mr. Walker has been for nearly twenty-nine years on the board of trustees of the South Paris Savings Bank, was for some years vice president, and has recently been elected president to succeed the late J. Hastings Bean. He is a member of several Masonic and other fraternal organizations, and has held the principal offices in a number of them.

Mr. and Mrs. Walker have had four children, of whom three are living, all of South Paris: Percy M. Walker, who as mentioned above, is now in the lumber business at North Newry; Eva, wife of Chas. H. Howard; and Alta, wife of Robert E. Wise, who with her family live at the home of her parents. Another daughter, Mertie G., who married Nathan A. Chase, died some years ago, leaving a daughter, Priscilla, who lives with her father in Ilion, N. Y. There are two other grandchildren, Albert and Olive Wise, who are members of the household at the Walker home.

The Walker family are connected with the Congregational church of South Paris, have always been its strong supporters, and active in the work of the church and its allied organizations.

Some years ago the fine home of the Walker family on Main Street was damaged badly by fire—so badly damaged that it was removed entirely and a new house built, where the family have since lived, which is one of the most comfortable and attractive homes in the place.

Shaw will hold another old fashioned dance at South Paris grange hall, Tuesday night, Feb. 16. Bus service from Norway has been secured.

Milford Chandler was in West Paris, Saturday and Sunday.

The grist mill is doing a good business, grinding more per day than ever before. The saw mill and shingle mill are both at work. The stores in the village are all fill'd up and prices are very scarce.

Jan. 29—Sunday and a very cold morning, mercury 14 below. The week past has been remarkably cold, with a great depth of snow. The saw mill has done nothing the past week. The grist mill does a great business, sometimes grinding 60 bushels of wheat per day, and 150 bushels of other grains. The Supreme Court have given their opinion to the House of Representatives in answer to questions submitted. The opinion sustains the House and throws the responsibility of delay on the seven Senators, in the majority. Mr. S. Greenleaf, Senior, is quite low and is not expected to live but a short time. Mr. T. Abbott and wife, mov'd back to their old home, Yesterday, having been absent at Massachusetts one year or more. The new Engine House at Portland is nearly completed and is now us'd for engines. The Dome has a smart draft, but the Jacks refuse to draw on account of the top of Dome being open; we are about to insert a damper in the top of Dome.

Feb. 5—Sunday, very cold morning (severe) but a pleasant sunshine. The saw mill is now doing a pretty good business. Wm. C. Hobbs and Wm. Frost at work in it. It is presum'd that the Senate yesterday made a governor, as the day before, on Friday, the names of A. P. Morrill and Wm. G. Crosby were sent up from the house. No news have yet arriv'd from Augusta. The new Engine House at Portland is now occupied and gives good satisfaction to the superintendent. Shoe making seems to be the order of the day in the village. Hall are preparing to erect large shoe shops next spring.

Feb. 12—Sunday. Pleasant, but cold; yesterday was a cold day. The Senate at Augusta made a Governor of Crosby, and on Friday last, Wm. P. Fessenden was elected to (U. S.) State Senator for six years from the 4th of March last, which is a complete triumph of the Maine law and the Whig party. Sleighing is very good, with about 3 feet of snow in the woods. Henry W. Millett is very sick and there is some doubt about his recovery, but generally, it is very healthy in the village. The people in the village are now very anxious for a cotton factory.

Feb. 17—Friday. Sold Thomas Crocker the Rawson land in Paris, without measurement; the same as I bought it of E. Gilman Rawson for $2,000, $200 cash down and $1,800 note on interest on demand, sign'd by Thomas Crocker, dated this day. The land sold was the River farm so call'd and formerly own'd by the late Ebenezer Rawson.

Feb. 26—Sunday. Snowey this morning; the past week has been most remarkable for cold known for several years. The trains on all R. Roads have been detain'd several days and the mails have been very irregular.

Feb. 28—A Mr. Bowers is now in the village for the purpose of examining the water power for a Factory. He thinks well of it for a mill of 4,000 spindles, or perhaps 5,000 spindles.

March 5—Sunday. Very pleasant day. A large amount of snow now on the ground, 4 feet, indicating the probability of a great freshet the coming spring. The winter so far has been very cold and an abundance of snow. The Rail Roads have been exceedingly obstructed, especially the Kennebec and Portland Road. Tomorrow will be the annual town meeting. The water is so low now in the pond we cannot run the saw mill. The grist mill is running all the time. Mr. Greenleaf is very sick and low. Isaac Bennett is very low, consumption. Next Sunday it is expected there will be a meeting at the Universalist House. The first calf at the barn 3 days ago. Hay is quite plenty, fire woods good, $2.50. Potatoes are worth here 60 cts. per bush. Corn and rye $1.00, wheat $2, flour $10 per barrel. All kinds of provisions are high. Sent to Mark H. Dunnell $5. to pay for a Justice's commission.

Many Norway Folks Are Showing How to Avoid Needless Suffering

There's nothing more annoying than kidney weakness or inability to properly control the kidney secretions. Night and day alike, the sufferer is tormented and what with the burning and scalding, the attendant backache, headache and dizziness, life is indeed a burden. Doan's Pills—a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys—have brought peace and comfort to many Norway people. Profit by this Norway resident's experience:

Harry O. Stimson, night patrolman, 22 Tucker St., says: "My kidneys were in bad condition, for they didn't act often enough. The secretions contained sediment, too. I used Doan's Pills from Noyes', now Ashton's Drug Store, and was cured."

Price 60c at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Pills—the same that Mr. Stimson had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

A well-known Boston business man at a recent conference told Frank Archer the following story:

Last summer I was taken seriously ill and during the hot spell I was convalescing at the hospital. One day a famous surgeon arrived to perform an extremely difficult operation. After he had completed his trying task, I heard him enter the corridor, puffing and perspiring and calling for the nurse. When the nurse hastened to him he said:

"Phew. it's hot! I'm all fagged out. Do you happen to have any Moxie on hand?"

Curious to see the noted specialist, I looked out into the corridor just as the nurse returned with a glass and a bottle of Moxie.

The great doctor drank it with gusto, then, seeing me, he smiled and raised his glass.

"That," he said, "is the most refreshing and invigorating beverage I can drink when I am tired and thirsty."

And I agreed with him for I have been a MOXIE enthusiast for many years.

JESUS, THE GOOD SHEPHERD

LESSON TEXT—John 10:1-30.
GOLDEN TEXT—"I am the good shepherd, the good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep."—John 10:11.
PRIMARY TOPIC—The Good Shepherd and His Sheep.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus the Good Shepherd.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What the Good Shepherd Does for His Sheep.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Many Sheep, but One Shepherd.

The relationship of the Messiah to His own is set forth in the Old Testament under the figure of the shepherd and his sheep. (Ps. 23, Ez. 34).

I. The Good Shepherd (vv. 1-18).

1. He Is the True Shepherd (vv. 1-6).

He came by the divinely appointed way. The power exercised by the Pharisees in casting out this man was not obtained by lawful means. It was stolen by them and exercised in the bold spirit of robbers. John the Baptist, and others of the prophets, had performed the function of the porter and opened the door to the Shepherd (v. 23). Despite the deceit, audacity, theft and robbery of these Pharisees, those who were Christ's sheep were declared to be forming a new flock and following Him as the true Shepherd (v. 4). The reason the man suffered excommunication for Jesus' sake was that he recognized Him as the true Shepherd and the Pharisees as strangers.

2. He Is the Door of the Sheep (vv. 7-10).

The way to fellowship to God is through Christ. He is the only door (Acts 4:12). There is absolutely no way to get into the fold of the redeemed but by Him. All who attempt it are thieves and robbers (v. 8). Those who become members of the flock through Him enjoy marvelous gifts (vv. 9, 10).

(1) Salvation—"Shall be saved." Not only saved now but saved eternally (vv. 27, 28).

(2) Liberty—"Shall go in and out" (v. 9).

Only those who accept salvation in Christ know what freedom is.

(3) Contentment—"Shall go in and out and find pasture" (v. 9).

The one who really enters the fold by Christ, the door, receives that which is all-satisfying to the soul.

3. He Is the Good Shepherd (vv. 11-18).

He is so devoted to His sheep that He willingly lays down His life for them. The hireling abandons his sheep in time of danger. The Good Shepherd has perfect knowledge of His sheep and they know Him (vv. 14, 15). He enjoys such personal intimacy with His sheep that He knows them by name and goes before them to lead the way and defend them from every danger. This He will do even unto death. On Calvary this was historically fulfilled. It was Christ's love for such sheep as this poor blind man that caused Him to give up His life in order to find for them the abundant life (v. 10). This sympathy is world-wide—"other sheep I have which are not of this fold." This suggests that the Gentiles have a place in His fold. All who believe in Christ form one flock. In order to save His sheep He voluntarily laid down His life (vv. 17, 18).

II. The Sheep (vv. 19-30).

1. Unbelievers Are Not His Sheep (vv. 19-26).

Christ's assertion that He was the good shepherd caused a division among the people. Some accused Him of being mad, others that He had a devil. To their request that He would tell them plainly if He were the Christ, He referred them to the testimony of His works, declaring that the secret of their inability to recognize Him was their unbelief.

2. They Recognize His Voice (v. 4).

There are many voices in the world, the voice of the hireling, the voice of the thief and the voice of the stranger, but none of these will the sheep hear. The voice of the true Shepherd is recognized by His sheep even amidst the babel of voices in the world today.

3. His Sheep Follow Him (vv. 3, 27).

This is the proof that they are His. The one who does not hear, heed, and obey the Lord's voice is clearly not His sheep. His sheep have unquestioned faith in His ability to lead them.

4. His Sheep Are Eternally Secure (vv. 27, 28).

The sheep are entirely dependent upon the Shepherd. It is the Shepherd's business to look after and care for the sheep. This He does for He knows them by name and is acquainted with their weaknesses and trials.

The Real Blessing

The real blessing, mercy, satisfaction, is not in the having or the lack of merely outward things, but in the consciousness that the true source of life and happiness is deeper than all these.—John W. Chadwick.

Eyes to See

As a face is made beautiful by the soul's shining through it, so the world is beautiful by the shining through it of a loving God. Happy the man who has eyes to see the shining.

Enfield Plummer Observed Birthday

Candlemas day we had all sorts of weather; it snowed in the forenoon, then the sun shown so now we are guessing just the same what the weather will be for the next six weeks. But in spite of storm and sunshine Enfield Plummer celebrated his 63d birthday. Just a dozen relatives and friends came in and spent the evening with him. They had a nice treat of raspberry mousse, homemade candy, apples, popcorn and a birthday cake decorated with candles.

No news in town, everybody is logging "that's all."

"Mellie-isms"

sionals and later coached by "Mellie's" old neighbors, flowed and swirled and pirouetted across the stage with all the grace and glamor that any dance invented by man could offer. Here was an exhibition of the poetry motion just as pleasing as the Russians had to offer. That simple old time plebian jig gave these dancers as much opportunity to thrill their audience as did any of the aristocratic music played that night.

I met "Mellie" Dunham back stage after his act. A little spare man with jutting chin and nose and white wavy hair and a fierce mustache and gentle eyes. He talked straight and true from his heart, just as a man would who lived seventy years in the heart of the Maine woods and hills and snows. For over fifty years he has fiddled for the dances in and near his town and made snow shoes for a living. And he has hunted the wolf and the moose and the bear. "I love the rythm of music," he said. And yet this gentle little fiddler has handled the rifle and the knife as often and as long as he has handled the fiddle and the bow.

Strange and out of place he seemed there amid the litter of backstage, that backwoodsman with his corduroy coat and weather beaten face and white moustache and soft voice as pretty girls in tights and spangles brushed by him and smiled at him and joked in friendly fashion. His cabin in the woods might have been a thousand miles and a thousand years away. But he liked it all. "It is fine," he said. I am having a wonderful time and I like this new life. Back home are nine motherless grandchildren, and when the wife and I get back there we will be able to see them through. If I fill the engagement I will have money enough for them. And if I fall dead on the threshold of my house the day I get back, I will still feel that this was the one act of my life and the best of all.

His wife called him and the champion fiddler of Maine turned to heed the call. Hunter, trapper and woodsman for a half century in the deep snows, he had unlaced the snowshoes and, after passing his seventieth year, turned to do his last and best act. He had fiddled all night for two dollars many the time. Now he fiddles for more than two hundred dollars a night, but he is the old woodsman still, keen and simple, gentle and wise and lovable.

In a little while he will go back home again to the big woods and the high hills and the glitter and glory of the stage will have passed like a beautiful dream.

I would not have missed that visit with the old fiddler and philosopher for the world.

If Mellie goes the whole distance on the Keith Circuit extending to the last of May, he may reach home just in time to entertain the Bass Island Club as is his annual custom. On one evening during the Club's session, Mellie, with the fiddle tucked under his arm, has trudged down a trail to the lake shore, rowed to the Island and scraped out hornpipes until the peep 'o day. The boys like it. Even C. H. Masury of Danvers, Mass. the veteran of the party and annual visitor for nearly fifty years, renews his youth with the rest during the "Mellie Night." They have had some great times.

The "boys" gave Mellie a rousing reception in Boston and New York and will in the spring entertain the fiddler in his own natural stage setting with the camp, the lake and Crockett Ridge for a background.

Anne Masseck of Brooklyn, N. Y. says: "I saw Mellie at the Hippodrome but was some disappointed that they did not give him a chance to play it alone. He looked picturesque and attractive as he sat in the corner fiddling. Mellie was the real headliner of the show. I did not recognize a soul on the stage as coming from Norway."

Don C. Seitz of the Outlook Co., 120 East 16th St., New York, writes: "I attended the B. F. Albee Theatre, Brooklyn, taking Mildred and friends. Mellie's was the best act on the program. Nate Noble was among the dancers from "Norway, Maine" and comported himself with grace and agility."

When complaint made by Mellie about the New York baked beans reached the ear of Mr. Ward, president of the Twitchell-Champlain Co., of Portland, a case of Hatchet brand beans was immediately forwarded him as a present. They were satisfactory and all right. Since then, Mellie and Gram have toted their baked beans along with their baggage and are happy on this score. Mellie wrote the firm: "You ought to see us New England farmers sail into those beans."

Magalloway Plantation Tractor Ploughing Out the Roads—Schoolhouse Caught Fire.

Clinton Bennett's family have been confined to the house with severe colds the past few weeks.

The Magalloway Plantation tractor and snow plow arrived the first of the week and they have been plowing out the roads in the three towns.

Fred Shaw is stopping at E. S. Bennett's. He was badly injured by a runaway horse while haying for the Brown Co., last summer, and confined to the hospital for several months.

The schoolhouse at Magalloway Plantation caught fire last Wednesday from the furnace, but was discovered and extinguished before much damage was done.
